Deacon Carys - I am exploring the possibility of having a circuit younger Christian group and would love your thoughts on this, about what you would like, where, time, how often. My thought so far is that as a younger Christian I often feel isolated, and have done in the past because churches I have been to have been majority retired people. Although I value Sunday worship it isn't necessarily what I would chose to go to if I wasn't a dedicated Christian. I hope the group would be encouraging and something that we could invite others to. I was thinking that a cafe church would be nice, if it was done with quality. I was thinking that it would reach all ages and particularly younger people who have children. I was thinking that we would have quality coffee and pastries, sit round table do a craft on a theme, have discussion, short talk and worship. What do you think? Also that there could also be a fellowship group meeting at someone's house or in a pub and maybe social gatherings. The idea is that younger people in the church (The missing generation 20's ish-45's ish) would find mutual support. I am aware that this style of worship would probably appeal to older ages as well. I would rather that it was an open group, but can I have your thoughts. Tel: 650296 carys.woodley@yahoo.co.uk
